TRINITY UNIVERSITY
2019 SAT TEST PREPARATION

PREPARING FOR THE SAT REVIEW: College Entrance Exams are the most important tests a high school student ever takes. This special 12-hour session will help juniors and seniors perform up to their potential when they take the SAT exam. Students will be introduced to the organization and format of the test, terms and concepts it uses and the kinds of questions asked. These sessions are designed to prepare students psychologically for the exam and to improve their verbal and math scores.

❖ VERBAL REVIEW: Will focus on grammar, paragraph construction, and the critical reading of passages. The verbal review will also address writing skills that are necessary for completing the essay section.

❖ MATH REVIEW: Will focus on the application of numerical, graphic, spatial, symbolic and logical techniques. It will include a review of geometry, algebra, translating English sentences into mathematical problems, and data sufficiency.

INSTRUCTORS:

Ms. Jennifer Rowe, graduated with a master’s degree in English Literature from Boston College in 2003 and is currently a PhD candidate in American Literature at the University of Maryland. Over the past eight years, she has taught a variety of writing and literature courses at Boston College, the University of Maryland and Trinity University, where she currently teaches several sections of the writing workshop, a course designed to prepare freshman students for the demands of college writing. For the past eleven years, she has also been a writing instructor for the Johns Hopkins University’s Center for Talented Youth, an intensive summer program designed for academically gifted middle and high school students.

Mr. Karl Graf, holds a masters degree in education from Trinity University. He is Chair of the Mathematics Department at San Antonio Academy and has been teaching SAT Review classes for the past 20 years. He has taught math at the elementary, middle school and high school levels.
